

WOODPERS SE TO STATE PRISON

Thorne, Hayes and Driskell Removed From County Jail
For Safe Keeping.

THIRD HOLDUP IDENTIFIED.

"Curley" Proves to be Walter Morgan
Of 768 Sixth Avenue and Is still at Large.

Early Tuesday evening rumors began to spread that a mob was being formed to storm the county jail and lynch Harry Thorne, James Hayes and Lucian E. Driskell. The rumors were so persistent that Sheriff Joseph C. Sharp became alarmed and at 1 o'clock this morning marched the three men across the lot at the back of the jail, loaded them into a carriage and hurried them to the state prison for safe keeping. They will remain there until brought into court.

There was intense feeling against Thorne and Hayes and when Sheriff Sharp began to fear that a mob of 200 men would rush the jail, he sent to police headquarters for help. Lieut. Hengel immediately detailed 10 patrolmen to resist the attack if any were sent to the jail. Sheriff Sharp and Sheriff Burdick and Hurlbuck and Sheriff Bynon took the prisoners from the county jail. Sheriff Sharp and Deputy Seager remained at the state prison all night, while deputy sheriffs and patrolmen guarded the county jail.

THIRD MAN IDENTIFIED.

Detective George Sheets stated Tuesday evening that he had learned the identity of the man called "Curley" who was with Thorne and Hayes on the night of the Fassel murder. The third man, according to Sheets, is Walter Morgan, aged 22 years, who has been residing at 768 Sixth avenue. Photographs and descriptions of the young man have been sent out and the police are confident he will be captured in a short time.

Scores of men have been taken to the city jail on suspicion, but of those who could give satisfactory explanations of their whereabouts on the night of the murder were released. Three or four of the men were rather mixed in their statements and these were charged with vagrancy and are being held pending investigation.

Chief of Detective Sheets obtained his clue as to Morgan from Mrs. F. N. Hayes, who saw the three men on the night of the murder. She recognized the photographs of Thorne and Hayes and then said she remembered seeing Morgan, whom she knows, with the two.

The young man has been away from his home for a long time. Since the death of his mother he has been wandering about the country. He turned up to the city Wednesday, but since the killing of Fassel has not been seen.

Word has been received by the police from Boise to the effect that Thorne and Hayes and a man known as "Curley," but whose name is Charles Rice, resided in Boise for several weeks. Hayes was known there as a crook, but Thorne worked various capacities. Hayes and Rice operated in southern Idaho and committed many crimes, according to information received. It is probable that Rice and Morgan are one and the same.

HAYES' STATEMENT.

Tuesday afternoon Hayes made another statement at the county jail to Chief of Police Barlow, Deputy Sheriff Burdick and other officers. His statement was as follows:

"I had spent the night in saloons and poolrooms, but had not been 'mooching' in the vicinity of the Fassel store, as alleged. Saturday evening Thorne, Curley and myself passed Fassel's store and went about half a block east. Returning to the store, Thorne went in first, followed by myself and Curley. While Thorne was holding up Fassel and the butcher, Curley went to the till and seemingly took some money, and while he was at the till the shot was fired. Curley immediately ran out of the store, passing behind me. I have not seen Curley since, although there was an understanding that the three of us should meet at the room immediately after the job had been pulled off. As soon as the shot was fired, Thorne went to the cash register and I left the store, meeting Thorne about a block or so away.

"Thorne and I walked a short distance, during which time I lost my gun in the street. Then we took a streetcar to the city, each sitting on different seats, but almost in the center of the car. We both got out at Third South and Main streets. I got off the rear end, but I don't know which end Thorne took in leaving the car, as I was separated at this time.

"I went to the room by the way of Second South and Commercial streets, arriving there first. About 10 minutes later Thorne came in. Then Wilson arrived.

"When the officers knocked on the door, Thorne was counting the money taken out of the cash register at the Fassel store. I did not get any of the money."

LECTURE IN SECOND WARD.

Elder Heber J. Grant will lecture tonight in the Second ward chapel, on the subject of "Charity." There will be special music for the occasion, and the public is cordially invited to attend. The service begins at 7:30 p.m. Last evening Elder B. H. Roberts delivered a lecture, "One Gospel in Many Dispensations," which was listened to by a crowded house. The address was a splendid one, and the musical program was well rendered and much appreciated by those present.

Communications From Correspondents

WHEN INDIANS WERE BAD.

Writing from Bountiful under date of March 28, W. D. Major says:

"Friday evening last I was at the old Social hall in Salt Lake where I saw a few of my comrades of the Black Hawk Indian war, and it is now nearly 44 years since we returned from Sanpete. A few weeks after that, our company, the Third Infantry, had a military ball, a copy of the invitation I am sending you herewith. All of the officers shown thereon have passed away, except Lieut. M. B. Shipp. The card reads as follows: 'Attention! Detachment Third Infantry, Sanpete expedition. Mr. William Major and ladies are respectfully invited to attend a military ball at the Social hall on Wednesday, Dec. 15. Dancing to commence at 8 o'clock p. m. Tickets $5. Committee, Maj. A. Burt, Capt. W. L. N. Allen, Capt. C. H. Crow, Lieut. C. Livingston. Floor manager, Lieut. M. B. Shipp. Printed at S. L. City, Dec. 4, 1866.' (The card is too old and faded to reproduce in half tone—Ed.)

"Preston Free, aged 79 years, who has lived on his 26-acre farm near Bountiful, has just passed his 79th birthday, is another of the surviving Indian war fighters. In spite of his great years, he is active, and his mental faculties are as alert as a man half his age. Tuesday afternoon while standing on busy Main street up town he said:

"What changes since I came here nearly 62 years ago. That was in 1849 and all the people were huddled together in the old fort down on Pioneer Square. The fort was built of big adobe bricks a foot and a half long and very wide. It took in the whole 10 acres, and the houses backed up to the fort walls from the inside. They were covered with brush and the long rushes that used to grow so thick down in the west fields. The year I came, the people ventured out of the fort and began building houses up where what was now the center of the business of the city. Several hundred wagons came across the plains in 1849.

"They told me that next morning after the Brigham Young pioneers arrived in the valley, there was a great bustling around to see who might have the honor of putting the first plow into the earth. President Woodruff was one of the first. That first furrow was turned about where the Knutsford hotel now stands.

"I was one of the first men to join the volunteer alliance for the protection of the settlers against the Indians, and was a major when we were mustered out. I started out to meet the Johnston army, but took down with typhoid, and was brought back. Those were stirring old times, to be sure."

AMUSEMENTS

Theater—That the season is nearing its end is shown by the diminishing attendance at many of the places of amusement. This was especially the case at the Salt Lake theater last evening, when Mr. Hanford gave his double bill of "The Old Guard" and "The Taming of the Shrew." Salt Lake's indifference to Shakespearean comedies is proverbial, and no one ought to know it better than Mr. Hanford, for he has been trying for years to rouse our theater goers out of their lethargy, but he was an more successful than usual last night. The part of Petruchio is one of his most spirited impersonations, and better still is his work as the old Waterloo veteran; in fact he does nothing half so well, but it is a bill too well worn in Salt Lake to attract in these days of red hot competition.

Mr. Hanford was well supported in the main, especially by Miss Droun, the main attraction, though his company still has a number of actors who appear lost in the mazes of Shakespearean verse. Tonight he returns to the modern in a farewell performance of "The American Lion."

McIntyre & Heath—These popular comedians appear at the Theater tomorrow night in a bill that will no doubt pack the house. The production of "In Hayti" runs through the week, with a Saturday matinee.

Orpheum—"Seldoms Venus" the name given the living statue act that is being presented as a part of the vaudeville bill at the Orpheum this week, is proving a real pleasure to the patrons of the house. "Seldoms Venus" is the highest development of artistic living statuary. The poses are faultless.

Whitney Hall—Tomorrow night the long awaited presentation of "One of the Eight" by the L. D. S. U. Dramatic club occurs in Whitney hall. Without doubt the friends of the club will crowd the hall to overflowing.

Colonial—That intensely interesting play "The Lion and the Mouse," with Mr. Walter Edwards in the leading role will continue through the week, the customary matinees today and Saturday.

Miss Tou's Concert—The advance sale of the big tabernacle concert to be given by Miss Maggie Tour and her tabernacle choir next Tuesday night is now going on at the Consolidated Music company's store.

Bungalow—The Bungalow Stock company will render "In the Bishop's Carriage" throughout the week, with the customary matinees this afternoon and Saturday.

Grand—The Man Who Does Things, presented by Mr. Lorch and his company, will continue throughout the week. The next attraction will be "Mizpah," the great biblical play.

Mission—Tonight winds up the popular bill headed by Bessie Valdaire and her company. A complete change goes on tomorrow night.

Shubert—Manager Florence feels well encouraged by the patronage bestowed on Prof. Hall's lecture, and he intends to secure other eminent lecturers to speak on popular subjects at his several houses.

SHEEP SHEARING SEASON BEGINS

Thompsons on Rio Grande and Fairfield on Salt Lake
Route Lead Off.

CLIP IS 11,000,000 POUNDS

Nearly a Million and a Half Fleeces
Will be Taken Before the Season Ends.

The sheep shearing season in Utah opened last Friday. Thompsons station on the Denver & Rio Grande and Fairfield station on the Salt Lake Route being the first corrals to receive sheep for the 1910 clipping. According to present estimates, the clip this year will equal if not exceed that of last season, which was a very heavy one, and which on the two roads named reached the total of about 11,000,000 pounds, 8,000,000 pounds being produced in the corrals adjacent to the Salt Lake Route, and 3,000,000 from the corrals on the Rio Grande.

The past winter has been more than usually severe on the sheep, as the cold has been lingering and persistent. That the snow has lain longer on the ground than usual, however, is taken as a good indication by the flockmen, from the fact that snow prevents the grinding of dust into the fleeces and delivers them in better and cleaner shape into the hands of the shearer.

NEVADA SHEEP SUFFER.

Sheep have suffered most seriously in western Utah and eastern Nevada this season than elsewhere, as the winter has been fierce and long in those localities. In Nevada many of the sheep are too weak to drive to the summer range, and on the line of the Western Pacific special rates have been put in to enable the flockmen to save their sheep by shipping them to the Idaho range. A shearing corral has also been established at Delia, on the line of the Western Pacific, where about 10,000 fleeces will be shorn this year. Shearing in the north end of the state usually follows about a month later than the earlier corrals of the south.

MORE THAN MILLION SHEEP.

It is estimated that nearly 1,000,000 sheep will be shorn during the season, which fairly opens this week, at the stations on the Salt Lake Route. The season, according to locality, extends over until towards the latter part of May. The corrals on the Salt Lake Route where large clips will be made are at Modena, Nephi, Jericho, Lofgreen, Black Rock, Grantsville, Webb's Corral, Fairfield, and Milford, at which large clips are made. The season will be a record for the heaviest clip will be made.

On the Denver & Rio Grande, about 400,000 head will be shorn this year, at the following corrals: Verde, Price, Vaca, Cotton, Cisco, Westwater, Thompsons, Iron Spur, Redmond and Christiansburg.

According to the best information obtainable, about 50 per cent of the wool clip this season has been contracted, the price prevailing on contract being ranging from 18 to 20 cents per pound. With the clip averaging up to that of last year, the season promises to be an exceedingly prosperous one for the sheepmen of Utah.

FUNERAL OF W. P. COOPER.

Large Attendance of Friends and Acquaintances Gather at Elks' Club.

The funeral of William P. Cooper was held this afternoon from the Elks' club house on State street under the auspices of the Elks and the Knights of Pythias. It was attended by a large number of members of the lodge and orders to which the deceased belonged, including, in addition to the Elks and Knights of Pythias, Wasatch lodge No. 1, F. and A. M. of Lynd's chapter No. 1, O. E. S., Herman Temple No. 3, Pythian Sisters, Salt Lake Aerie No. 67, F. O. E., Salt Lake Council No. 1517, Royal Arcanum; Knights of Maccabees, Commercial club and the Press club.

Many old time friends and acquaintances viewed the body from 2 to 2 p. m., and at the close of the services it was placed in the private vault of Undertaker Hall on West Temple street, whence it will be shipped later for Baltimore, Md., for burial.

CHERRY CROP NIPPED.

Frost Also Plays Havoc With the Apricot Outlook in This Section.

The cherry crop in this and other counties is believed to have been destroyed by the frosts of Monday and Tuesday nights. East Mill Creek people had been preparing to use smudge pots to ward off the frosts, but those useful devices will not be here until next week, and can not therefore be of much use. Bountiful farmers had their "lamps trimmed and burning," however, Monday night, and saved themselves, thereby, many a dollar. Along the east benches south of this city, it is thought that 75 per cent of the cherries are gone. It is also feared that the entire apricot crop in this section has been destroyed. Further north the wind acted largely as a protection, preventing the frost from gathering, so less damage was suffered.

STRIKERS' PLACES FILLED.

Of the 15 leather workers who walked out on the Salt Lake Hardware company, several have returned of their own motion without the company's making any of the concessions demanded by the national union. Vice President Schweikert of the hardware company says none of the agitators will be taken back, but will meaning workers with families can return to work at any time. Men are being imported from the east to make up such deficiencies as may exist.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS OLD.

Garrett E. Conover Celebrates Century Anniversary Today.

Garrett E. Conover, whose home is at 134 west Fourth South street, will celebrate his one hundredth anniversary today.

He was born March 29, 1810, at New Brunswick, New Jersey, when James Madison was president of the United States. His mother, of German ancestry, lived to be 104 years old, and a sister, Mrs. Fanny Place, attained the age of 101 years. His father, William Conover, was killed in the war of 1812. His grandmother was one of four women selected to hold the floor wreath under which George Washington drove in a cart at Trenton, N. J., at the close of the Revolutionary war. This aged man is still hale and hearty, but slightly bent, and uses glasses only when he reads.

CHURCH CROWDED AT FUNERAL OF FASSELL

Congregation Deeply Moved—Rev. P. A. Simpkin's Reference to Rev. Cold-Blooded Murder.

The funeral of George W. Fassel, the young grocer who was foully murdered Saturday night in his store, was held at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at Phillips Congregational church. The love and respect in which the young man was held was attested by the outpouring of Salt Lake citizens and the deep sympathy they manifested for the bereaved. The church was crowded to its capacity and beautiful floral offerings covered the casket in which rested all that is mortal of George W. Fassel.

The services were presided over by Rev. P. A. Simpkin, pastor of the church, and he paid a glowing tribute to the memory of the young man. Prior to the church services, prayer was offered at the family residence and the loved one of the murdered young man gave their last farewell, after which the cortege proceeded to the church. The pallbearers were F. P. Holt, Howard Don, S. M. Price, F. H. Wright, J. W. Shields and C. M. Lees, representing the Merchants' association, the church, Sunday school and Christian Endeavor. Music was furnished by Mrs. Simpkin, who presided at the organ, and a quartet composed of Miss Walker, Miss Schöbe, Mr. Burdwell and Dr. Chandler.

The congregation was deeply moved by the services, especially when Rev. Simpkin referred to the dastardly crime, and as he dwelt upon the character of the dead man and spoke words of comfort to the bereaved, eyes were dimmed and tears of silent grief fell.

Rev. Simpkin delivered a brief address but it was most impressive. He said in part:

"There is no place to which this body may be more fitly brought than to this altar, at which, in the bloom of his young manhood, he gave in simple surrender his life to the service of God and men, and where he drank his first sacrament with Christ."

"The widespread grief that makes the city as one in sympathy for the bereaved, who when we meet has back of it the consciousness of a great hurt, of a wrong done in the black deed that hurried this poor lad so quickly into God's presence."

"The men who went out to rob at any cost succeeded. They robbed the home of its support and defense, leaving the widow and her children without a pillar. They robbed the body of a strong, beautiful life; they robbed the city of a splendid, honorable, enthusiastic man of business, they robbed him most of all—they snatched with bloody hands the unrolling of a life of honor, happiness and service. It was a black, dastardly deed."

"I would speak here no word of hate or of the sensations at the altar of God. But I should be recreant in my duty did I not say that this dastardly deed of its animation, calls to the officers of the commonwealth to let law proceed swiftly but justly to its stern ends. Lives such as wrought this deed are a pollution and a menace to the social order."

"While one feels a pity for the tragedy in the development of their animalism, rather than their souls, yet the sacredness of a clean, useful life here violated must have a vindication. All the good citizenship of the state stands united in its sentiment that for this crime, and all like it, there shall be only the mercy of justice, the righteousness of law."

"The pitifulness of the youth in these criminals is an incident. It was a youth that with deliberate purpose went to its task of robbery and murder and should face the terrible consequences it has engendered."

Miss Walker and Miss Schöbe sang "Face to Face," the choir rendered "Thou That Sleep and the funeral cortege followed the body to its last resting place in Mt. Olivet cemetery.
